User translates single word

- It exists in the dictionary → pull from database
- It doesn't exist in dictionary and api call successful → add to all list and insert
- It doesn't exist in the dictionary and the api fails → show input as the output

User translates paragraph

- For words in dictionary → pull and save results
- For words not in dictionary → query api then save results to dictionary and all list for user (all list can't be deleted unless the user is as well and words in list can't be deleted.)
 - Note to make a list of detected words and query as a batch for efficiency
- Words on the input side are colored based on knowledge
 - When known words are selected it shows translations and a don't know button that lowers confidence
 - When unknown it shows translations and an add to list button.

Lists

- User adds custom word → add nonverified
- User edits translation → create new word_id and reassign the list word relation.
- User adds dictionary word → same logic as translation
- Switch flashcard swaps input and translation. For now ignore this feature since it is difficult for multiword translations to become the input. For example financial institution, and bank could point to the same 銀行. But this may be worked around by labeling the switch as non-verified and user specific.

Quiz

- Updates confidence and last date reviewed. For POC keep algorithm simple
